

ABOUT PATIENCE

RAINER MARIA RILKE

One needs to leave things
To their own undisturbed development
Which comes from deep inside
And can't be rushed, Gestation is all – and Then giving birth ...

Ripen like the tree,
That doesn't rush its sap
And stands confidently in the spring storms,
Without fear
That no summer will follow.

Because it will come!

But it will only come to those who are patient,
Those who live as if eternity
Was still lying in front of them,
So carefree, calm and vast ...

One must have patience

With everything unresolved in the heart and try to love the questions themselves as if they were locked rooms or books written in a very foreign language.

It's a matter of living everything.
When you live the questions, perhaps you will enter, gradually,
without even noticing it
one of those days
into living the answers.
